How Are Historical Records and Files Identified?

Records and files are identified by file numbers.

To help identify historical USCIS file numbers, review the chart below that lists available series of USCIS historical files and shows sample file numbers.

Requests for copies of USCIS historical records or files must identify the record by the file number or another file identifier. USCIS cannot retrieve a record without a file number. If you do not have the file number, you should first submit Form G-1041. For more information, visit the Requesting Records page at www.uscis.gov/genealogy.
