Mini Supporting Statement A

A.1 Circumstances Making the Collection of Information Necessary

The Specialized Program of Research Excellence (SPORE) is a cornerstone of National Cancer Institute's (NCI) efforts to promote collaborative, interdisciplinary translational cancer research. SPORE grants involve both basic and clinical/applied scientists working together and supporting projects that will result in new and diverse approaches to the prevention, early detection, diagnosis, and treatment of human cancers. The Translational Research Program (TRP) is adopting a more user-centered design approach to its website with information related to active SPORE grants. The SPORE's grant program has created a website that is used by researchers, clinicians, patients and families, advocates, and congressional staffers to inform political and/or budgetary decisions. For this reason, it is imperative that the information provided by the grantee is concise and consistent across all grants that are funded.

The National Cancer Institute Division of Cancer Treatment and Diagnosis is given the legislative authority to collect this information under the "Purpose of Institute" (Section 410 of the Public Health Service Act (42 USC § 285)). This request is consistent with NCI's purpose to conduct and support research, training, and health information dissemination programs.

A.2 Purpose and Use of the Information Collection

The SPORE website (<https://trp.cancer.gov/default.htm>) identifies the scientists and describes extramural research for the public providing transparency about grant-funded projects and current scientific advancements. The website is also used by patients and caregivers to find information about grantees conducting research related to a specific type of cancer. The information collected is also used to improve the grantee-provided information on the SPORE website so that grantees could easily access resources for collaborative work. And finally, the information may be used by legislative staff to inform political and/or budgetary decisions, and to respond to data calls with structured and concise information.

The previous submission, 0925-0046 (Approved 5/31/2019), was a pilot study to test the conversion from completing and emailing the information in a Word/PDF document to NCI, to an electronic, online webpage for completion. The pilot asked questions about clarity of instructions, length of time to complete the SPORE information update, what type of information the respondents were looking for, and usability of website. Since then the website has been updated to streamline the submission process.

A.3 Use of Information Technology to Reduce Burden

The respondents will be sent an email and webpage instructions (Attachment 1) requesting they complete the webpage online (Attachment 2). The SPORE Directors, SPORE Administrators, and/or Administrative Assistants can electronically complete and submit the Webpage Information.

A.4 Efforts to Identify Duplication

No other similar collection of information exists.

A.5 Impact on Small Businesses or Other Small Entities

N/A

A.6 Consequences of Collecting the Information Less Frequently

The information will be collected from the individual investigators once a year for the next several years. The information will be collected and updated annually for newly funded and renewal SPORE grantees. Annual collection of this information is required to inform the general public, patient advocates, and the larger scientific community about the currently active SPOREs' projects, cores, and programs (e.g. organ sites, mechanisms, and scientific areas represented by the SPOREs).

Failure to collect this information on a year-to-year basis can affect the accuracy of the information presented to NCI leadership by patient advocates and legislative staff.

A.7 Special Circumstances Relating to the Guidelines of 5 CFR 1320.5

This survey will be implemented in a manner that fully complies with 5 C.F.R. 1320.5.
