

Dear Colleagues,

The 10th Annual Symposium on Global Cancer Research (ASGCR2022) Steering Committee is pleased to announce that we have officially opened the nomination period for the 7th Annual Rachel Pearlman Award to recognize an individual who has made major contributions to global cancer research, practice, and training and whose work focuses on low-and-middle-income countries. The award honors Rachel Pearlman, MD, MPH who received the award in her memory, in 2016, following her death at the age of 38, from gastric cancer. Dr. Pearlman viewed the practice of medicine as a privilege, always striving to serve her patients better. As part of the Symposium each year, we recognize one outstanding professional for their excellence in global cancer research and practice by inviting them to give a keynote lecture at the Annual Symposium.

If you are interested in nominating someone or self-nominating for this award please access the nomination form here. The link provides additional details about the award, the selection criteria, and includes the nomination form itself. The deadline for nominations is December 10, 2021. Please reach out to Taylor Estes if you have any questions.

Sincerely,
