The selection of your targeted respondents

1. Do you have a customer list or something similar that defines the universe of potential respondents and do you have a sampling plan for selecting from this universe?
[] Yes [X] No

If the answer is yes, please provide a description of both below (or attach the sampling plan)? If the answer is no, please provide a description of how you plan to identify your potential group of respondents and how you will select them.

The website gets about 5,000 visitors per month. Respondents will receive the instrument via a pop-up/intercept survey on the Center for States website. More specifically, respondents will be identified to participate in the Website Intercept Feedback Survey based on targeted website behavior (e.g., movement or clicking activity) while on the website. For example, a respondent will be offered a survey based on the number of clicks (3 clicks within the website pages). They can opt to participate in the brief survey or opt out when the survey is offered. We anticipate that 1% of those who are offered the survey will participate based on published response rates using this intercept method. The total estimated number of anticipated responses is 700 per year (one response per respondent per website session). If a website user goes back to the website within 24 hours, the user will not receive any additional offers to take the survey. However, if the user returns after 24 hours, they will receive offers to take the survey again. Because the user may have different information needs each time they visit the website, we anticipate that an individual may respond to a survey more than once in any given year.
