Annual Survey of Jails

The Annual Survey of Jails (ASJ) is a nationally representative survey of county or city jail jurisdictions and regional jails in the country. Started in 1982, the ASJ tracks changes in the number and characteristics of local jail inmates nationwide. It also collects annual data on jail inmate turnover, jail capacity, and space usage by other authorities. About 910 agencies, representing the nation's 2,851 jail jurisdictions, participate in the ASJ each year.

What to include and exclude in this data collection

INCLUDE—

- ✓ Confinement facilities usually administered by a local law enforcement agency, intended for adults but sometimes holding juveniles
- ✓ All jails and city/county correctional centers that hold inmates beyond arraignment. Report data on all inmates, including those held in separate holding or lockup areas within your facilities.
- ✓ Special jail facilities (e.g., medical/treatment/release centers, halfway houses, and work farms).
- ✓ Temporary holding or lockup facilities if they are part of your combined function.
- ✓ Inmates held for other jurisdictions, including federal authorities, state prison authorities, American Indian or Alaska Native tribal governments, and other local jail jurisdictions.

EXCLUDE—

- ✗ Facilities that are exclusively used as temporary holding or lockup facilities, where inmates are generally held for less than 72 hours and not held beyond arraignment.
- ✗ Privately operated jails and facilities operated by two or more jurisdictions (i.e., multi-jurisdictional facilities). These jails will be contacted directly for this data collection.

I am writing to support the continued collection of the Annual Jail Survey data, as it is critical to understanding the operations, policies, and practices across a wide variety of jails. In addition, the AJS is the only reliable and national source for certain types of data on jail admissions, operations, and outcomes. Much of the data required is already collected for internal jail administration purposes, thus the burden of continued collection is smaller than for data requests that are not a standard part of jail administration.

I understand that this is an informal response because the formal process is not open to the public.

The collection of jail data should not have been discontinued in the first place. Despite whatever statistically-based language was used to justify discontinuing it, the real explanation was political. The data which you stopped collecting reflected the unfortunate reality that a disproportionate percentage of jail populations were black, even as the data show the unfortunate---but accurate---reality that a disproportionate percentage of violent crime is committed by black men who are within a relatively narrow age group.

It is for those reasons that jail data collection should be resumed. I suspect that you will probably censor my comment for the same reasons that jail data collection was stopped.

re Public Comments 88 FR 10938 <https://www.federalregister.gov/d/2023-03592>

Hello Bureau of Justice Statistics:

May I have a copy of the proposed information collection instrument with instructions?

I would like to read what is asked to comment on.

My interests are two fold:

- 1) the Census Bureau is unable to conduct Census consistently in all jails and prisons thereby making all data inaccurate;
- 2) as a disability advocate, I want to assure that the data taken asks appropriate questions about those who enter jails and prisons (education level, diagnosed disability, were they given access testing their disability before entering. As well, how they are tested for a disability, educated and given job training (rehabilitation) once inside, and how prepared they are for the outside world when they are released.

These will assess the outcomes of the upstream service provision, giving a greater picture of why people are becoming incarcerated, activities within jails and prisons to prepare professional service delivery and courts for release.

With gratitude for your consideration,

Belinda

To: Zhen Zheng, Bureau of Justice Statistics
From: Jim Parsons, Vice President for Research, Monitoring, Evaluation and Learning;
Vera Institute of Justice
Subject: Comments on Annual Survey of Jails

The Vera Institute of Justice (Vera) is providing this information in response to the invitation for public commentary on the proposed reinstatement of the Annual Survey of Jails (OMB Number 1121 – 0094). We are responding to the following questions included in the invitation.

- Evaluate whether the proposed collection of information is necessary for the proper performance of the functions of the Bureau of Justice Statistics, including whether the information will have practical utility.
- Evaluate whether and if so, how the quality, utility, and clarity of the information to be collected can be enhanced.

Comments

- The annual survey of jails includes valuable information that Vera regularly uses in our work to better understand the criminal legal system. Many of the data measures are essential for shaping the field's understanding of how jails are used across the United States.
- Vera suggests that the quality and utility of statistics around race, ethnicity, and gender could be substantially enhanced without adding undue administrative burden on jails.
- Under current data collection practices, the Bureau of Justice Statistics does not collect information on gender and race/ethnicity together of people that are incarcerated in jails. Rather, it collects gender populations and race/ethnicity separately. This prevents tracking the way that racial disparities vary by gender. BJS's work on prison populations by race and gender indicates that there are substantial variations in racial disparities by gender at the prison level. More data is needed to understand how local jails may or may not be different. Historically, BJS collected information this way prior to 1993, and we suggest a return to a similar approach now. Because many jails use electronic data systems.

- As a medium-term objective, it would be helpful for jails to collect information on people who identify as transgender (even if they are also registered under a binary male/female variable), since there are specific concerns and policy questions around housing, services, and other issues related to transgender people.
- Admissions and releases from jail by gender are very useful. Vera suggests that information on race/ethnicity should also be collected for admissions and release statistics.

Dear <<Salutation>> <<Last Name>>:

In a few weeks, you will receive an email invitation for you to participate in Bureau of Justice Statistics' Annual Survey of Jails (ASJ). The invitation will contain instructions for completing the survey. When the invitation arrives, please log onto the data collection website and fill out the form promptly.

Started in 1982, the ASJ is the longest running annual data collection focused on local jails and jail populations. The data are widely used by practitioners, policy makers, researchers, and the general public to understand the conditions and needs of local jails. [If not Top150: Your participation in the Annual Survey ensures that your agency will be represented in our national statistics on local jails.] [If Top150: As one of our nation's largest jail jurisdictions, your data are critical to this important data collection.]

The reference date for the 2023 ASJ will be June 30th, 2023. The survey will ask about your jail's confined population on this date, including population breakdowns by sex, race, age group, conviction status, severity of offense (felony or misdemeanor), and U.S. citizenship status. You can preview the PDF form of the survey now at: <http://bjsasj.rti.org>. The online survey will be available on July 1, 2023.

The Bureau of Justice Statistics has contracted with RTI, International to conduct this data collection. If you have any questions, please feel free to e-mail us at bjsasj@rti.org or call at 1-866-354-4992.

BJS appreciates your generous cooperation and partnership in supporting this important effort.

Sincerely,

Alexis R. Piquero, PhD
Director, Bureau of Justice Statistics

Example Nonresponse Calling Guide

Contact #1

Hello, my name is Lizzie Smith and I'm calling on behalf of the Department of Justice regarding the 2023 Annual Survey of Jails. We recently mailed you a reminder to submit data for your agency online. This is just a friendly check in to make sure you received that email and to see if there is anything I can help you with. The ASJ is the only annual national data collection that provides information on local jails and jail inmates. Your agency was selected to represent many other similar agencies in the nation and any data that you can provide will be very helpful. I will check back in with you soon if we are not able to touch base. My phone number is 800-334-8571, x25984. Thank you.

Contact #2

Hello, I am following up to a message I left for you last week about the 2023 Annual Survey of Jails. Again, I'm just checking in to see if you might be able to submit data for your agency soon. Please let me know if I can help in any way. You will receive a reminder email soon. If we can close out this process by the end of September that would be great. My name is Lizzie and my phone number is 800-334-8571, x25984.

Dear <<Salutation>> <<Last Name>>:

I am writing to ask for your assistance in completing the Bureau of Justice Statistics' (BJS) 2023 Annual Survey of Jails (ASJ). We would greatly appreciate if you would submit your form by October 1, 2023.

Your data, combined with data from other local jails, allows BJS to publish on national trends in jail populations. BJS is committed to disseminating accurate and timely statistics to inform the practices and policies of jails nationwide.

You may submit your data online—

Website:     <https://bjsasj.rti.org>
Username:    <<username>>
Password:    <<password>>

If you prefer, you may download the 2023 ASJ form from the website above, fill it out, and fax or mail it back to us.

If you have any questions about this survey, please contact our hotline at (866) 354-4992 Monday through Friday, 9 AM to 5 PM, EDT, or email bjsasj@rti.org. RTI International is BJS's data collection agent for the ASJ.

BJS is authorized to conduct the ASJ under 34 U.S.C. § 10132 and may only use data collected under its authority for research and statistical purposes. This data collection has been approved by the Office of Management and Budget (OMB Control No: 1121-0049; Expiration Date: 06/2023).

Thank you very much for your participation and continued support for BJS's statistical programs.

Sincerely,

Alexis R. Piquero, PhD
Director, Bureau of Justice Statistics
U.S. Department of Justice
