The National Household Education Survey (NHES) is a data collection program of the National Center for Education Statistics (NCES) designed to provide descriptive data on the education activities of the U.S. population, with an emphasis on topics that are appropriate for household surveys rather than institutional surveys. Such topics have covered a wide range of issues, including early childhood care and education, children's readiness for school, parents' perceptions of school safety and discipline, before- and after-school activities of school-age children, participation in adult and career education, parents' involvement in their children's education, school choice, homeschooling, and civic involvement. The US is administering the NHES in 2023 for the thirteenth time since the collection began in 1991. Data collection will run from January 2023 through August 2023. In conjunction with NHES:2023, NCES is also conducting a debriefing study with respondents to the NHES who reported their child was enrolled in virtual classes. This debriefing study is designed to provide insight about virtual school experiences that can help plan future survey administrations. OMB approved recruitment and collection for the NHES:2023 and the NHES:2023 debriefing study (included as Appendix 4) in August 2022 (OMB# 1850-0768 v.19). This change request is for approval to make two sets of changes, one to the recruitment approaches for the NHES:2023 topical mailings, and another for the NHES:2023 debriefing study for virtual education. First, we have decided to add a fifth topical package mailing for some respondents. In addition, we have decided to refine our recruitment efforts for the NHES:2023 debriefing study for virtual education. This request makes no change to the total estimated respondent burden and does not change the cost to the federal government.
