The Office for Research Protections determined that the proposed activity, as described in the above-referenced submission, does not require formal IRB review because the research met the criteria for exempt research according to the policies of this institution and the provisions of applicable federal regulations.

Continuing Progress Reports are not required for exempt research. Record of this research determined to be exempt will be maintained for five years from the date of this notification. If your research will continue beyond five years, please contact the Office for Research Protections closer to the determination end date.

Changes to exempt research only need to be submitted to the Office for Research Protections in limited circumstances described in the below-referenced Investigator Manual. If changes are being considered and there are questions about whether IRB review is needed, please contact the Office for Research Protections.

Penn State researchers are required to follow the requirements listed in the HRP-103 – Investigator Manual, which can be found by navigating to the IRB Library within CATS IRB (<http://irb.psu.edu>).

Investigators are responsible for reviewing the History tab of their STUDY in CATS to ensure that any administrative HRPP requests are addressed in a timely manner.

This correspondence should be maintained with your records.
