TITLE OF INFORMATION COLLECTION:

Office of Intramural Training & Education (OITE) – Resilience Training Program: Becoming a Resilient Scientist Series – Student Feedback

PURPOSE:

The National Institutes of Health (NIH) carries out and funds biomedical research in an effort to prevent and cure common and rare diseases. We also train the next generation of doctors, researchers, and medical support staff who will improve human health in the future, both across the country and around the world. Navigating school, the career exploration process, research environments, and the stress of national/international news can seem overwhelming and lead us to doubt ourselves just when we need confidence the most. Through workshops and group discussions, the OITE will work to identify attitudes and behaviors that can help us be more resilient as we navigate difficult situations in school, work and life.

Each workshop will highlight emotional intelligence competencies needed for success in research and healthcare careers and will provide strategies for developing these competencies as part of your educational journey. Scientists at NIH and Universities are encouraged to participate in the entire series as the material relates and concepts will be developed throughout the series, which runs from Fall 2020 through Spring 2021. The workshops and group discussions in the series are:

- I. An Introduction to Resilience and Wellness
- II. Exploring our Self-Talk: Cognitive Distortions and Imposter Fears
- III. Self-Advocacy and Assertiveness for Scientists
- IV. Developing Feedback Resilience
- V. Managing Up to Maximize Mentoring Relationships

DESCRIPTION OF RESPONDENTS:

Participants in the Becoming a Resilient Scientists Series and scientists from NIH and Universities at all educational levels: undergraduate, postbaccalaureate, medical students, graduate students, postdoctorates, professors, investigators, etc.... The OITE asks participants to anonymously complete and submit a feedback form to provide information the OITE may use to improve the seminar series.

The OITE anticipates each session to have approximately 1000 registrations. However, the response rate to the feedback form is estimated to be 50% or less. The numbers presented below are for a 50% response rate of the event attendees.
