The Board of Governors Federal Reserve System provides this self-assessment template to institutions regulated by the Federal Reserve Board (FRB) in support of the Interagency Policy Statement Establishing Joint Standards for Assessing the Diversity Policies and Practices of Entities Regulated by the Agencies dated June 10, 2015. Pursuant to the Statement of Policy, a self-assessment by an institution is voluntary.

Please provide the following information and submit via email to:
ODI-Section342-DiversityStandards@frb.gov

An institution may utilize this template or its own assessment tool when conducting a self-assessment of the diversity policies and practices using the standards contained in the Statement of Policy. Prior to completing the self-assessment, click the Detailed Standards for more information.

Use of Information by the Federal Reserve Board

The FRB may use information submitted by the institution to monitor progress and trends in the financial services industry regarding diversity and inclusion in employment and contracting activities, and to identify and highlight those policies and practices that have been successful. The FRB may also publish information disclosed by the institution, such as leading practices, in any form that does not identify a specific institution or individual or disclose confidential business information. If an institution submits confidential commercial information that is both customarily and actually treated as private by the institution, the institution should separately designate such information as "confidential commercial information" as appropriate, and the FRB will treat as confidential the information that is designated by the institution as "confidential commercial information" to the extent permitted by law, including the Freedom of Information Act, 5 U.S.C. § 552.

DETAILED STANDARDS

Institution's Commitment to Diversity and Inclusion

The leadership of an institution with successful diversity policies and practices demonstrates its commitment to diversity and inclusion. Leadership comes from the governing body, such as a board of directors, as well as senior officials and those managing the institution on a day-to-day basis. These Standards inform how an institution promotes diversity and inclusion in both employment and contracting and how it fosters a corporate culture that embraces diversity and inclusion.

Workforce Profile and Employment Practices

Many institutions promote the fair inclusion of minorities and women in their workforce by publicizing employment opportunities, creating relationships with minority and women professional organizations and educational institutions, creating a culture that values the contribution of all employees, and encouraging a focus on these objectives when evaluating the performance of managers. Institutions with successful diversity and inclusion programs also regularly evaluate their programs and identify areas to be improved.

Procurement and Business Practices – Supplier Diversity

Companies increasingly understand the competitive advantage of having a broad selection of available suppliers to choose from with respect to factors such as price, quality, attention to detail, and future relationship building. A number of institutions have achieved success at expanding available business options by increasing outreach to minority-owned and women-owned businesses. As in the employment context, institutions often use metrics to identify the baseline of how much they spend procuring and contracting for goods and services, how much they spend with minority-owned and women-owned businesses, and the availability of relevant minority-owned and women-owned businesses, as well as changes over time. Similarly, institutions may use outreach to inform minority-owned and women-owned businesses (and affinity groups representing these constituencies) of these opportunities and of the procurement process. In addition, institutions' prime contractors often use subcontractors to fulfill the obligations of various contracts. The use of minority-owned and women-owned businesses as subcontractors provides valuable opportunities for both the minority-owned and women-owned businesses and the prime contractor. Institutions may encourage the use of minority-owned and women-owned subcontractors by incorporating this objective in their business contracts.

Practice to Promote Transparency of Institution's Diversity and Inclusion

Transparency and publicity are important aspects of assessing diversity policies and practices. Greater awareness and transparency give the public information to assess those policies and practices. Institutions publicize information about their diversity and inclusion efforts through normal business methods, which include displaying information on their websites, in their promotional materials, and in their annual reports to shareholders, if applicable. By making public an institution's commitment to diversity and inclusion, its plans for achieving diversity and inclusion, and the metrics it uses to measure success in both workplace and supplier diversity, an institution informs a broad constituency of investors, employees, potential employees, suppliers, customers, and the general community about its efforts. The publication of this information can make new markets accessible for minorities and women and illustrate the progress made toward an important business goal.

Entities' Self-Assessment

Institutions that have successful diversity policies and practices allocate time and resources to monitoring and evaluating performance under their diversity policies and practices on an ongoing basis. Institutions are encouraged to disclose their diversity policies and practices, as well as information related to their assessments, to the Federal Reserve Board and the public.
