

Non-Substantive Change Request

On June 6, 2023, the Office of Management and Budget (OMB) approved a request for an emergency PRA approval in Control No. 3060-1308, Reporting On Foreign Ownership of International Section 214 Authorization Holders. Through this collection, the Federal Communications Commission (Commission) will conduct a one-time information collection through an online form. The one-time information request was adopted by the Federal Communications Commission (Commission) in Review of International Section 214 Authorizations to Assess Evolving National Security, Law Enforcement, Foreign Policy, and Trade Policy Risks, IB Docket No. 23-119; Amendment of the Schedule of Application Fees Set Forth in Sections 1.1102 through 1.1109 of the Commission’s Rules, MD Docket No. 23-134, Order and Notice of Proposed Rulemaking (Evolving Risks Order and Notice).¹ On August 23, 2023, the Commission requested approval from OMB for the questions and instructions for this one-time information collection as a non-substantive change to Control No. 3060-1308. On August 31, 2023, OMB approved the non-substantive change approval request. On November 1, 2023, Commission requested an emergency extension of this information collection. On November 1, 2023, OMB approved the request for an emergency extension. The expiration date is June 30, 2024.

The Commission is requesting OMB approval for the final de minimis, non-substantive changes to the questions and instructions for this one-time information collection. The Commission is making de minimis, non-substantive, clarifying changes to the questions and instructions in light of resolution of several technology issues that arose during creation of the online form. These proposed changes are clarifications that will ensure the user understands the online form technical requirements and will ensure the Commission collects the required information. We request that OMB treat this as a non-substantive change to Control No. 3060-1308. The final questions and the filing instructions are attached.
