The information provided will be used to prepare and issue an identification card or pass. Fingerprint Retention Policy

As a condition of employment, all personnel must undergo a background investigation for access to National Archives and Records Administration facilities, systems, information, and/or classified materials before they can enter on duty. Through this process, the Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) maintains Federal employee fingerprint images to report any criminal activity by employees to their agencies, specifically any criminal activity that may occur after the completion and adjudication of the required background investigation. Agencies are required to provide a notification to all employees of their rights with respect to the collection and use of fingerprints, and to the accuracy of the information obtained from this continuous vetting process. This notification serves as that notice. You can find the FBI Privacy Act Statement at this link.

In most cases, the NARA's Office of Human Capital will not need anything further from you to complete this process. If our records do not contain a classifiable fingerprint for you, NARA's Office of Human Capital will make arrangements with you at a later date to obtain an updated fingerprint.
