

How will my data be protected?

Your data is secure. All information will be kept confidential and used only for statistical purposes, as required by federal law. Every person who works on this study has taken an oath to protect your data. They are subject to a jail term of up to 5 years and/or a fine of up to $250,000 if they disclose ANY identifiable information about you.

We remove any information that could reveal who you are. Names are never recorded or linked with your answers. Names and addresses are never shared.

You take the lead. You will answer the interview questions in private, entering your responses directly into the computer. The interviewer will not hear or see your responses. We are only interested in the combined responses from all of the nearly 70,000 participants.

We take cyber security seriously. Security measures include firewalls, strong passwords, encryption, and other protection measures for your data.

What is NSDUH?

The National Survey on Drug Use and Health (NSDUH) provides up-to-date information on alcohol, tobacco, mental health and other health-related issues in the United States.

NSDUH began in 1971, and is conducted in all 50 states and the District of Columbia. Each year, we interview nearly 70,000 people who want to shape the future of our nation's health services. Your responses can inform the planning and funding decisions that impact your community.

How was I chosen?

Your address was randomly chosen through scientific methods. We do not have any information on your substance habits or health. You were randomly selected.

First, you will need to answer some general questions that only take a few minutes. Afterwards, one or possibly two members of your household may be selected to complete the full interview. It is possible no one will be selected for the interview.

Sponsored by the Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration (SAMHSA), part of the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services (HHS). Conducted by RTI International, a nonprofit.
