		What is Login.gov?		Login.gov provides a secure and private online access option to participating government services and applications. With a Login.gov account, users have the capability to use the same access credentials to sign into multiple government websites. Like the USCIS online account, also known as myAccount, the Login.gov account meets federal security standards.			Text/Link
		How does a Login.gov account work with a USCIS online account (myAccount)?		If you have both a USCIS online account and a Login.gov account, you need to link the two accounts. You can use your Login.gov credentials to access your immigration information on the participating USCIS account platforms. You can always use your unique USCIS login credentials to access only your USCIS online account anytime you want – even after you have linked it to Login.gov.			Text
		What if I already have a USCIS online account and want to use Login.gov?		Once you link your existing USCIS online account to your new Login.gov account, you may access your USCIS online account by using your Login.gov access credentials. Login.gov is an optional way to sign on that allows people to easily access many government applications.			Text
		What if I don't have a Login.gov account?		1.Click the "Sign in with Login.gov" button on the USCIS Sign In page to be directed to the Login.gov website. 2.Click "Create Account" and set up your account with Login.gov. 3.Once you've finished creating your account with Login.gov, you will be directed back to USCIS to log in; using your email, password, and verification code. 4.Then you will be automatically directed back to your USCIS application. 5.You will only have to do this process once to link the two accounts. Moving forward, you can use the "Sign in with Login.gov" button for a quick sign-on experience.			Text
		What if I already have a Login.gov account?		1.Click the "Sign in with Login.gov" button on the Sign In page. From there you will login to Login.gov with your email, password, and security code. 2.After logging in to Login.gov, you will be directed back to the USCIS website to sign in. You will use your USCIS online account credentials (email, password, and OTP verification code) to successfully sign in. 3.Then you will be automatically directed back to your USCIS application. 4.You will only have to do this process once to link the two accounts. After that, you can use the "Sign in with Login.gov" button for a quick sign-on experience.			Text
		What if I already have a Login.gov account, do I also have to create a USCIS online account to explore my immigration options?		Yes, you must create an online account to the file benefit requests and access certain online services. Your new USCIS online account can be linked to your existing Login.gov account. Login.gov is an optional sign on experience to allow people to easily sign into many government applications using the same access credentials.			Text
		What if I need help?		If you need assistance accessing your Login.gov account or experience problems while creating a Login.gov account, please explore the Login.gov help center prepared by the Login.gov team.			Text/Link
		Where can I find more information?		You can learn more about Login.gov on their website. You can learn more about a USCIS online account at this page.			Text/Link
		Am I required to have a Login.gov account to use USCIS applications?		No. You must create a USCIS online account to access USCIS applications. Login.gov is an optional sign on experience to allow people to easily sign into many government applications.			Text
