

Practical utility is defined as “the ability of an agency to use information, particularly the capability to process such information in a timely and useful fashion.” 44 U.S.C. 3502(11). As stated in the Description of the Need for the Information and Proposed Use of the Information, the study will quantify the minimum frictional performance required for a bathing surface to reduce slips and falls. Staff intends to work with the ASTM F15.03 Subcommittee on Safety Standards for Bathtub and Shower Structures to replace the obsolete ASTM F462 standard for bathing surface friction that ASTM withdrew in 2016. This study will be used to inform CPSC of major requirements needed to achieve an efficient and effective slip-resistance standard. With this information, the Commission details its need and ability to process and use this information collection.

The National Floor Safety Institute (NFSI) also submitted comments to suggest that CPSC should not conduct their own research and instead rely on NFSI’s research and standard. As stated in the Description of the Need for the Information and Proposed Use of the Information, the Commission describes the need for this study to support CPSC’s efforts to work with the ASTM F15.03 Subcommittee on Safety Standard for Bathtub and Shower Structures to replace the withdrawn ASTM F462 standard.
