As you know your 2016 "guidelines" became state laws in many states, rules for many medical boards, and a reason to reject care and medications by many insurance companies. While it seems you tried to correct in 2022, very little has changed. For years I had my primary care doctor, pain control doctor, and my pharmacy within a mile of each other. Since the guidelines I now have to travel 32 miles from home to the only pain clinic near me. I believe the CDC must spell out that all these entities that made hard and fast rules out of your guidelines are causing harm to chronic pain patients and must change their policies.
