

Author Full Name : AnonymousReceived Date : 01/09/2025 06:58 PMComments Received :

Since 2016 people with chronic pain have been suffering. Not once have u all redone these guidelines. The last one you made it much worse for chronic pain patients. Stop putting a limit to the amount of opioids one can have. This has put everyone into a box. No one can have more than 60 mg or 90 mme. This is making people suffer. People that were once able to work now have to get disability. I broke my back in a car accident in 1996, I then injured my back again in 2003. I used to be able to do daily activities with more medication. Now because of your guidelines I only get a few hours a day of activities. There should not be a cap on the amount of milligrams of pain medicine someone could have. In turn you are making people suffer. And if the doctor does prescribe more than the 90mme they have the DEA sending letters. This is not right at all. You are making people suffer and very hard to access much needed medication. Please stop putting a cap on milligrams for pain meds.