Dear the CDC and OIRA, please see attached my comments regarding pain management practices and attitudes both in pain management clinics and as executed by physicians and clinicians since 2013, and the ways in which the CDC's 2016 and 2022 guidelines allow and encouraged these patient-harming practices and attitudes to develop, in a larger context of a medical field focused on physician needs, not patient needs, no longer insisting that its physicians and clinicians be educated, and permitting a TL;DR approach to knowledge while not challenging bias and being comfortable with delaying concrete care while also not providing interim pain relief support.
