Why Are We Asking These Questions?

Thank you for being part of the audience feedback teams to help the Adolescent Brain Cognitive Development StudySM! (If you are joining us for the first time, welcome!) This project includes questions about health topics, life experiences, and other things that influence how brains change between childhood and adulthood.

In this survey, you will see some questions or instructions that will be used in the ABCD Study[®] later this year. The team will also discuss some of these questions with you in live, virtual discussions with other teens your same age. We are asking for your help because we would like to hear the perspectives of teens from different backgrounds from all over the country. Later this year, teens like you from across the country will answer these questions. Your feedback will help the investigators ask questions in the best way possible.

Parts of this activity are a little different from other surveys you may have taken. We are interested in your thoughts on how study materials or questions are written, instead of your answers to the questions themselves. If something feels uncomfortable or confusing—we want to know. Please don't worry about being polite or holding back. We value your feedback whether you agree or disagree, as we want to hear a wide range of opinions.

Your responses will be kept private. For open-ended questions, please do not enter any information that could identify you, such as your name or email address.

This activity will work best on desktop or tablet screens.

If you have questions, please email [PROJECT LEAD] at [PROJECT LEAD EMAIL].

ABCD Study Background

As a refresher, or if this is your first time joining us: In the ABCD Study, researchers will work with youth for 10 years starting at ages 9 and 10 to understand the different influences that affect brain development and general health. As part of the study, researchers will use questionnaires to ask youth about their physical and mental health; various life experiences such as playing sports, using social media, or trying drugs; and their family, school, and neighborhood environments, among other things.

The youth participating in the ABCD Study are as diverse as the United States. They come from 17 different states, from big cities and small towns, and from different economic backgrounds. The questions are asked of all participants regardless of their race, ethnicity, national origin, religion, sexual orientation, or gender identity. A large and diverse study like this makes it possible to investigate what contributes to differences in brain development, to understand what puts some people at risk for health problems, and to learn what makes some people able to recover from difficult experiences more easily than other people do.

You can provide insight into what young people think; the youth in the ABCD Study are about the same age you are now. Your feedback will help ensure the success of the ABCD Study in its quest to understand the many experiences that impact teen health and development and may help future generations of teens to live better, healthier lives.

Feedback on Survey Questions

In this section, you will be asked to review sample survey questions from the ABCD Study. We don't need to know your answers to these questions. Instead, we are interested in your feedback on how these questions are written.

Feedback on Study Materials

In the next few questions, you will see some materials that will be used in the ABCD Study. We would like your feedback on these pages. In this part of the survey, you can click on parts of the pages.

Please read this page.

What are EHRs?

Health records are the information collected about you when you get health care. They include information about the care you get. Electronic health records, or EHRs, are when this information is kept in secure electronic systems.

Why is this study being done?

Your EHRs contain important information about your health. They are a way for researchers to get a picture of your health over a long period of time.

We will add your EHRs to your ABCD Study data we have already collected. This will allow researchers to use these health records alongside your other ABCD Study data to better understand adolescent and young adult development. Information from your record will be part of the ABCD Study database. Information that directly identifies you, like your name or address, will not be part of this database, like with the rest of your ABCD data. Before researchers will be allowed to see your data, they will have to sign a contract agreeing they will not try to find out who you are. This contract also says how they can and cannot use your data. Researchers will use this database to make discoveries about health. You can learn more about the research being done at <https://abcdstudy.org/publications/>.

What is in my EHRs?

The information in your EHRs depends on what kinds of health care providers you see. Your EHRs tell about any health problems you have seen a health care provider about. They tell about care you have received. They may list the medicines you take. They may have laboratory/test results. They may have images, like X-rays. If you have had a medical procedure, notes about it will likely be in your EHRs. Any time you see or have any interaction with a health care provider that uses EHRs, a note is created.

Your EHRs may also tell how much you were billed and how much you paid for your care.

Is there sensitive information in my EHRs?

There may be sensitive information in your EHRs. For example, there may be information about your use of alcohol or drugs. Or about tests and treatments for sexually transmitted infections, like HIV. They may have results from genetic (DNA) tests. We will be able to see this information.

If you have seen healthcare providers such as doctors, nurses, social workers, medical technicians or counselors, information about your diagnosis and treatment may be in your EHRs. For example, if you have seen counselors or doctors who treat:

- addictions (also known as substance use disorders);
- mental health conditions, like depression or bipolar disorder; or
- trauma, from things like domestic violence and sexual assault.

We will be able to see this information.

How will my confidentiality and privacy be protected? Is there anyone else who will see my EHRs?

Like with the rest of your ABCD Study data, we will add your EHRs to the ABCD Study data resource that is broadly available to researchers. It will not include your name or other information that directly identifies you, like your address or other identifiers. Access to this database is strictly controlled. Before researchers will be allowed to access the data, they will have to sign a contract agreeing they will not try to find out who you or other participants are. This contract also says how they can and cannot use your data. These researchers may be from anywhere in the world. They may work for commercial companies, like drug companies. Their research may be on nearly any topic.

Your information may no longer be protected by patient privacy rules (like "HIPAA") once you share it with ABCD. This is because ABCD does not provide medical care. The patient privacy rules that apply to health care providers do not apply to ABCD. The copies of your EHRs that are with your health care providers will still be covered by HIPAA. The copies that are shared with ABCD will be protected by other privacy rules and agreements like those described in this consent form and your main ABCD Study consent form. These include the rules and agreements that researchers must follow to use the ABCD Study database.

What if I don't want ABCD to have my EHRs? What if I change my mind?
Sharing your EHRs with ABCD is voluntary. You get to choose. No matter what you decide, it will not affect your medical care. It will not affect your treatment, payment, enrollment, or eligibility for any health care benefits. It will not affect your ability to continue in the ABCD Study.

If you decide to authorize ABCD to get your EHRs, you can change your mind at any time. If you decide you want to stop allowing us to get this information, you need to tell us. You can use the contact information at the end of this form to call or write to us.

If you tell us to, we will stop getting your EHRs. Data from your EHRs will not be used for new studies. But, if researchers have already used data from your EHRs for their studies, ABCD cannot get it back. Also, we will let researchers check the results of past studies. If they need your old data to do this work, it will be given to them.
