

Consent to Participate in the National Longitudinal Survey of Youth 2027

We are asking your permission to allow your child to participate in the National Longitudinal Survey of Youth 2027. This form tells you basic facts about the survey: what information is collected and how the data will be kept safe.

What is the National Longitudinal Survey of Youth 2027?

The National Longitudinal Survey of youth is a federal survey. It is sponsored by the U.S. Department of Labor, Bureau of Labor Statistics (BLS) and is being conducted by RTI International (RTI).

We have been doing studies like this for over 50 years to learn how young people experience work and the labor market throughout their lives. The last time we began a study like this one was 1997, and the teens that participated then are now in their 40s. The National Longitudinal Survey of Youth helps researchers and lawmakers understand how your child's experiences at home, school, and work impact their life as they age.

Why was my child asked to participate?

Your child was randomly selected along with 17,000 young people across the country. Your child's participation is voluntary. By participating, they will help ensure the results represent the experiences of all youth in the United States.

Will my child be paid for participating?

Yes, to thank your child for their participation, they will be paid $50 for completing the first survey and receive a certificate of community service for their valuable contributions.

What will happen during the interview?

First, we will ask your child to complete an in-person interview that lasts about 1 to 1½ hours. We will ask your child questions about a wide range of topics, including their education, work, health, family, and social experiences. The interviewer will only ask questions that apply to your child.

Some of the questions they receive may be personal or sensitive. For example, youth who are age 15 or older will be asked questions about reproductive health and experiences with the criminal justice system. These questions will be answered on their own using a computer or tablet. Your child may choose not to answer any question may stop the interview at any time. You will not be penalized or lose any government benefits or services if your child skips any questions or stops the interview.

After that, we plan to follow-up every 1 to 2 years for your child to participate again. Participation may last a number of years to better understand youth experiences, attitudes, and behavior as they move from school into the workforce.

Who will see the information my child provides?

Strict federal laws prevent us from releasing information that could identify you or your family to anyone without your permission. Your child's name will never be connected to the answers they provide in this study. All data will be combined with the answers from other youth who participate. These combined answers will not include your child's name, your name, or any personal identifiers.

How will my child's information be used?

Only the Bureau of Labor Statistics, its employees, agents, and partner statistical agencies, will use the information your child provides. They will only use it for statistical purposes. Your child's information will be kept confidential to the full extent permitted by law.

To learn more about the study, you can visit our website at <https://www.bls.gov/nls/nlsy26.htm>. You can also see how the Bureau of Labor Statistics has used information from older studies by visiting this site: <https://www.bls.gov/nls/home.htm>.

How can I, as a parent or caregiver, participate?

You can voluntarily participate in a separate parent/caregiver survey. Parents and caregivers provide vital information about your child and family that helps us better understand how youth move from school into the workforce. The survey asks questions about your child's early life experiences, family background, important events, and health that they may not remember. The survey also asks you about yourself and your family.

What will happen in the parent/caregiver survey?

- The parent/caregiver survey can be completed at home and lasts 1 to 1½ hours
- You will answer questions on a tablet or computer that we bring. If possible, we will have you complete your survey while a member of our research team interviews your child.
- Some of the questions asked in the survey are personal. However, you may skip any question, and you may stop the survey at any time. You will not be penalized or lose any government benefits or services if you skip any questions or stop the survey.

In addition, we are requesting your permission to allow your data as a parent or caregiver to be linked to other available data sets. Your child's data would not be linked. Linked data sets could include your answers to other Federal surveys and the administrative records of your participation in Federal programs. The linked data files would not contain personal identifiers, such as names, addresses, or places of work. Data will be stored in a protected data storage facility.

Will I, as a parent or caregiver, be paid for my participation?

Yes, to thank you for your participation, you will receive $50.

What if I have questions?

If you have any questions, you can contact the RTI Project Director, Charles Knott, MPA, PMP at 919-541-6294, or cknott@rti.org.

If you have any questions about you or your child's rights as a participant, contact the RTI Office of Research Protection at 1-866-214-2043.
