

government-wide policies currently do not require that agencies obtain SBOMs from their software vendors; stakeholder experience with consuming and comparing data highlights the benefits of further clarity and more common and more precise specifications. By updating the 2021 NTIA SBOM Minimum Elements and adding new minimum elements, CISA aims to continue to promote SBOMs as a way to provide relevant and available data to software users to illuminate their software supply chains, better inform their risk management processes, and drive their software security decisions.

III. List of Topics for Commenters

CISA seeks comments on the 2025 CISA SBOM Minimum Elements and the following topics:

(1) Should any elements be removed from the 2025 CISA SBOM Minimum Elements, meaning the element should not be required for all SBOMs? Which elements, and why?

(2) Should CISA include any additional elements in the 2025 CISA SBOM Minimum Elements, meaning the element should be a requirement for all SBOMs? Which elements, and why?

(3) Are the definitions and defined processes and practices in the 2025 CISA SBOM Minimum Elements, including new definitions, updated definitions, and the definitions carried over from the 2021 NTIA SBOM Minimum Elements, sufficiently clear to support automated creation and consumption? How can these definitions be improved?

(4) Are there specific contexts, technologies, or sectors where these proposed minimum elements are not feasible? Please provide as much detail as possible.

CISA also welcomes comments on other areas or approaches currently absent from the guidance.

This notice is issued under the authority of 6 U.S.C. 652(c)(10)–(11) and 6 U.S.C. 659(c)(7).

Christopher Butera,

Acting Executive Assistant Director for Cybersecurity, Cybersecurity and Infrastructure Security Agency, Department of Homeland Security.
