

Self-Response Interview Questionnaires

Decennial Census Temporary, Intermittent Applicant Information
Collection

3/6/2025

This slide deck contains wireframe mock-ups of screens as they are being programmed to appear in the Decennial Administrative, Recruiting, Hiring, and Training System (DARHTS), to be used to recruit and hire temporary, intermittent decennial census applicants.

The DARHTS will collect the information electronically. The DARHTS could have a slightly different look and feel than the mock-ups. For example, the font used or placement of text on the screen could change, or colors or other cosmetic changes could be made. The questions could also be presented in a slightly different order than they are presented here. However, the data collected will not change.

The U.S. Census Bureau is an Equal Opportunity Employer.

Enumerators locate households and conduct interviews with respondents, explaining the purpose of the Census, asking questions to validate addresses, and recording data. Enumerators go to specific addresses to interview people to complete a questionnaire or to verify the status of addresses. They travel from housing unit to housing unit, carrying materials, climbing stairs, working in bad weather and having to deal with reluctant households.

Census Field Supervisors may work in similar situations to ensure that workloads are completed on time or when follow up is needed.

*Are you willing and able to perform the duties mentioned above?

- Yes
- No
- No – but I would like to explain

* Please explain your response.
