

Author Full Name : Andrew SmithReceived Date : 01/17/2025 11:13 AMComments Received :

These data collections are a burden to small school districts. The amount of time spent to essentially pull data from the state only to restructure it and send it to CRDC seems misplaced and cumbersome. All of the data entered into the CRDC data collection is data that is reported to the state already. It would seem to many of us that it would be much more efficient for the states to work directly with CRDC, and visa versa, to streamline this process. Many of us in small school districts have to shoulder this burden while maintaining our daily duties. Small districts like ours do not have dedicated administration to do these and it is left up to someone to complete. Doing the CRDC every other year wasn't great, but now that we have this to look forward to every year, if that's a correct statement, isn't ideal. Please consider the burden that these collections put on the staff of these districts moving forward.