OCR Committee, As the person who submits the CRDC, I spend days collecting the data. This is in addition to the months I have spent on Texas Education Agency submissions, that contain the same data. There are also Title IX, Title VI, and Title II data collections which are handled by the district. Every year it seems that OCR adds additional questions that take extra time to find the data and calculate. With districts already spending so much time, that they have a minimum of one staff member, depending on the size of the district working daily on Public Education Information System (PEIMS) data. The CRDC submission is just an unnecessary submission, when the data requested could simply be collected from the state and federal levels.

I appreciate the ability to offer comments about the submissions,

Respectfully,

A district Student Information Services (PEIMS) Coordinator
