I am an attorney who does occasional pro bono immigration cases. The current process for updating addresses with both EOIR and USCIS is both cumbersome and difficult.

Many immigrants move frequently and I usually leave my address as the main point of contact so that mail does not get lost or not forwarded. Eliminating this ability will require more frequent name changes.

In addition, I have had several clients who were victims of domestic violence, and wish to keep their addresses confidential. This would eliminate this opportunity.

A better way to reduce paperwork would be to consolidate the USCIS and EOIR address change processes so that only one update is required.
