NE Washington currently has a dire need to have wolves de-listed and a science based hunting season added. There's documented livestock depredation, deer, elk, moose, and coyote populations have been drastically affected by them. With only native people allowed to trap, even farmers have a rough time with livestock being killed. Those saying wolves have little affect on game populations are just going off assumption. Wolves with dead fawns and calves are a common occurance on game cams and these predators need to be controlled by hunters, ranchers, and farmers.
and may include authorized harassment or authorized lethal take of experimental population animals in the act of attacking livestock.
