A. APPLICABLE ONLY TO CHEMICAL IDENTITY CBI CLAIMS

A person may request extension of a claim of confidentiality for chemical identity if EPA has provided notice that the claim for that chemical identity is approaching expiration, if the chemical identity was previously reviewed and approved by EPA and assigned a unique identifier, and if the claim has not been denied, withdrawn, or already expired. In most cases, eligible chemical identities will also appear in the Master Inventory File as a confidential substance. To assert or request extension of a confidential chemical identity claim, you must submit detailed written answers to the following questions:

C1. Is this chemical substance publicly known (including by your competitors) to be in U.S. commerce? If yes, please explain why the specific chemical identity should still be afforded confidential status (e.g., the chemical substance is publicly known only as being distributed in commerce for research and development purposes, but no other information about the current commercial distribution of the chemical substance in the United States is publicly available). If no, please complete the certification statement: I certify that on the date referenced I searched the internet for the chemical substance identity (i.e., by both chemical substance name and CASRN). I did not find a reference to this chemical substance and have no knowledge of public information that would indicate that the chemical is being manufactured or imported by anyone for a commercial purpose in the United States. [provide date].

A person may request extension of a claim of confidentiality for non-chemical identity claim(s), within a case, if EPA has provided notice that the claim for those data elements are expiring and, if the claim(s) have not been denied, withdrawn, or already expired. To assert or request extension of a confidential claim, you must submit detailed written answers to the following questions:

G1. Please specifically explain what harm to the competitive position of your business would be likely to result from the release of the information claimed as confidential. How would that harm be substantial? Why is the substantial harm to your
