The number of pro-ratio months you entered is not expected based on the plan year ending date indicated on this filing. You can still proceed, but be aware the PBGC will calculate premiums based on the total number of months between the plan year commencing and ending dates. If the reason for the short plan year is because the plan anticipates distributing assets pursuant to a standard termination before year-end, but after the premium due date, consider using the "alternative approach" for short plan years described in the "Who Must File" section of the Comprehensive Premium Filing Instructions to eliminate the possibility of late payment charges, should the distribution take longer than expected.

Is this the plan's last filing?

- ☒ Yes
☐ No

Your filing indicates that the obligation to file premiums is ending because the plan is no longer covered by PBGC. In PBGC's experience, plan administrators sometimes believe coverage has ceased when, in fact, it has not. The rules regarding whether coverage has ceased can be somewhat complex, such as in situations where it appears the only remaining participants are substantial owners. The only way to be certain that coverage has ceased is to submit a coverage determination request. To do so, simply submit the coverage determination request form available on PBGC's website at: <https://www.pbgc.gov/prac/other-guidance/insurance-coverage>

The number of pro-ration months you entered is not expected based on the plan year ending date indicated on this filing. You can still proceed, but be aware the PBGC will calculate premiums based on the total number of months between the plan year commencing and ending dates. If the reason for the short plan year is because the plan anticipates distributing assets pursuant to a standard termination before year-end, but after the premium due date, consider using the "alternative approach" for short plan years described in the "Who Must File" section of the Comprehensive Premium Filing Instructions to eliminate the possibility of late payment charges, should the distribution take longer than expected.

Is this the plan's last filing?

☒ Yes

☐ No

Your filing indicates that the obligation to file premiums is ending because the plan is no longer covered by PBGC. In PBGC's experience, plan administrators sometimes believe coverage has ceased when, in fact, it has not. The rules regarding whether coverage has ceased can be somewhat complex, such as in situations where it appears the only remaining participants are substantial owners. The only way to be certain that coverage has ceased is to submit a coverage determination request. To do so, simply submit the coverage determination request form available on PBGC's website at: <https://www.pbpc.gov/prac/other-guidance/insurance-coverage>

Is this the plan's last filing?

- ☒ Yes
☐ No

Your filing indicates that the obligation to file premiums is ending because the plan is no longer covered by PBGC. In PBGC's experience, plan administrators sometimes believe coverage has ceased when, in fact, it has not. The rules regarding whether coverage has ceased can be somewhat complex, such as in situations where it appears the only remaining participants are substantial owners. The only way to be certain that coverage has ceased is to submit a coverage determination request. To do so, simply submit the coverage determination request form available on PBGC's website at: <https://www.pbgc.gov/prac/other-guidance/insurance-coverage>
